Cleveland Will Favor Any Kind of Tariff Compromise.

House and Senate Almost as the lottery traffic was objected to. Far Apart as Ever.

clines Propositions.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3 .- The tariff conferrees made two ineffectual attempts to get together yesterday. Both senate and house conferrees, however, declare that a tariff bill will be forthcoming in a few days. Yesterday's hitch was over the sugar schedule. No less than thirty propositions were submitted and rejucted. They ran the entire range of newspaper discussion as to probable sugar compromises, and after a free discussion there was nothing to indicate that any material change from the senate schedule was possible. But equally important were the developments concerning coal and iron ore. The house conferrees have been forced to the conclusion that the house sentiment is not sufficiently strong to enable them to secure free coal and mon ore at the risk of defeating the bill. Upon this proposition the president has been emphatic, but the fact stands forth that in the South and West, where the Demoeracy must look for its votes, there is no strong sentiment in favor of either free coal or free iron ore. With the entire country demanding some kind disposed to yield on these demands. There are other schedules more imupon free coul and iron ore the house places itself at a disadvantage by having to yield on all other schedules ments, be submitted to the house to be voted upon. This the house managers absolutely refused to do. As a second proposition, the senate managers asked permission to submit the Wilson bill to the senate, and this revenue duty on sugar cannot now be avoided, and there is no heart in a fight for coal and iron ore, which alone aids the New England manufactures. The great beneficiary of the free coal schedule would be the Canadian company, the concern recently capitalized for $20,000,000, to flood the Atlantic coast with Nova Scotia coul as soon as it is placed on the free list.

This growing sentiment in favor of accepting the senate bill was clearly shown in the house. Just after the house adjourned, one of the congressmen remarked to another: "I will venture that if you submit the propomition squarely to the twenty-five Democratic congressmen here as to take the senate bill and end this controversy, three-fourths of them would were anxious to take the senate bill heavy as usual at this time of the

It will be impossible to hold the year. house much longer. If the conferrees do not come to terms the house will demand that a report of some kind be made, and having once secured an opportunity for voting, it will pass the senate bill and have the controversy

It is rumored that the president is now willing to make any compromise it is possible to effect. The attitude of certain representatives who were dogmatic and determined a few days 500 feet long. ago, but now who urge a settlement of the controversy at all hazards confirm this report.

Senator Smith bas left with Senator Murphy for Saratoga. Neither gave an indication as to when he would return, but it is intimated that they had completed their legislative deliberations for the session. If the tariff bill is to be defeated, Smith and Murphy will do it. Murphy left his pair with Chandler with the undertanding that the conferees were to be backed if they stood firm. Farther than this, nothing can be learned. The significance of this action is that these senators do not propose to sub-mit to any juggling with the bill.

To-day it is more clearly manifest than ever before that there will be no material changes in the sugar, coal or iron ore schedules. There may be some slight modifications in the phraseology and changes in other schedules, but whatever the result, the tariff law, if one is enacted, will be practically the senate bill.

Proceedings in the Senate. WASHINGTON, Ang. 3 .- But one more appropriation bill-the deficiencyremains to be acted on by the senate, the sandry civil having been passed yesterday after a three days' discussion. The most important amendments adopted yesterday were the increase of the quarantine fund from 1,000,000 neres of "desert" lands to the states in which the desert land laws apply, as well as to Nebraska, Kansas, Utah, Arizona, New Mexico

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Aug. 3 .- The tally destroyed at an early hour yesterday morning, was erected in 1870 at a cost of $35,000, and since that at a cost of $35,000, and since that time the state has spent about $3,000 on it in improvements. It is insured in different companies to the extent of $13,000. The contents, however, consisting of an extensive library, a chemical labratory, school furniture and apparatus, is a total loss. Many of the books were the property of students away for the summer vacation.

As soon as settlement of the inaurance is made, President J. W. Henry of the board of regents will call a meeting of the board. There is a question as to whether or not the board has the authority to rebuild until the legislature authorizes it, but this will be determined at the meeting and if it can do so the board will at once proceed to construct another building.

The school will open as usual in September and will be continued without interruption as room can be made in the other buildings for all the classes.
